Leadership Lessons from the Wright Brothers: Part 5

Humility and Teamwork Carry the Mission

Creek Kids Leaders,

As I finished The Wright Brothers, two things reminded me of our Creek Kids team: their humility and their teamwork. When the world finally noticed them, reporters tried to give Wilbur all the credit. He immediately pointed to Orville. When they tried to credit Orville, he insisted Wilbur was the true genius. And all throughout their journey, their sister Katharine quietly held everything together. She answered letters, coordinated travel, encouraged them after failures, and cared for Orville after the crash. She never flew a plane, but much of their success rested on her shoulders.

God often moves His mission forward through humble, unseen teamwork. That is as true in our ministry as it was in their story.

“In humility value others above yourselves.” — Philippians 2:3

Thank you for serving with humility and working as a team for God’s Kingdom.

Blessings,
Dave
